

TRAVEL

FORTRESS OF SOLITUDE

The Spanish island of Majorca is pretty easy to like any month of the year. But October, when temperatures are crisp and the throngs of tourists have disappeared, is when you're apt to fall in love with it, especially if you're ensconced at CAP ROCAT, a 19th-century former-military-fortress-turned-luxe-getaway. Presiding over a pristine private beach, the magnificent hotel is a haven for discerning bon vivants fond of tennis, outdoor saltwater infinity pools, a no-kids rule and shooting-pads-cum-suites boasting spectacular views of the Bay of Palma.

Cap Rocat offers just the right mix of modern luxury, historical charm and seductive seclusion to make you want to turn your back on the rest of the world forever (or at least for a couple of weeks).

For more details or to make reservations, visit www.caprocat.com.

